Background:

With over a decade of diverse leadership experience in behavioral health, education, and program operations, Nick's career reflects a strong focus on driving high-quality outcomes through organizational strategy, team development, and program innovation.

His background includes developing adventure-based curriculum, managing safety and logistics for field programs, and integrating clinical concepts into experiential learning. Nick was introduced to the world of concrete and post-tensioning at a young age and is excited to bring his leadership experience and systems-thinking approach to overseeing PTI's certification department, with the goal of enhancing program quality, expanding impact, and continuing to advance the world of concrete.

His Role at PTI:

Currently serving as the Certification Director at the Post-Tensioning Institute (PTI), Nick oversees the development and continuous improvement of certification programs in alignment with ANSI/ANAB standards and evolving industry needs. His work involves cross-functional coordination with technical committees, instructors, and subject matter experts to expand and refine PTI's certification offerings, enhance workshop content, and ensure successful certification events. With a strong background in quality assurance, safety systems, and training excellence, Nick is well-positioned to lead within high-accountability, standards-driven environments and is committed to supporting PTI's long-term strategic goals through operational excellence and innovation.

His Skills Include:

- Strategic Leadership & Organizational Development
- Program & Certification Oversight
- Operational Efficiency & Process Improvement
- Quality Assurance & Standards Compliance

Education and Designations:

- MBA, Gies College of Business, University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign – Expected 2028
- B.S., Human Biology, Lyman Briggs College, Michigan State University – 2015
